Investment Summary
March 2024

Praemium (SMA)

Market & Economic Commentary

The first quarter of the calendar year has been extremely positive for global share markets. While many investors were optimistic going into 2024, the market’s robust first-quarter rally still managed to surprise us, with numerous share market indices ending the month at record all-time highs.

With such an exuberant start to the year, cautious investors would be right to query whether strong returns can continue. Bullish sentiment among fund managers in March reached the highest level since the beginning of 2022, according to a monthly Bank of America survey. Their allocation to stocks and risk appetite are also at multi-year highs. Often such bullishness has indicated in the past that markets are becoming over-bought and complacent.

Nevertheless, a strong US economy underpins investors’ confidence. Consumers are still spending; employers are still hiring, and unemployment is still below 4%. Fed Chair Jerome Powell believes inflation remains on a downward trend, despite a recent spell of hotter-than-expected price reports. Fed officials are still pencilling in three rate cuts later this year.

Still, some investors wonder if the underlying strength of corporate profits can keep pace with investor optimism. Analysts expect companies in the S&P 500 to report a third straight quarter of earnings growth. Profits for the first quarter are projected to have risen roughly 3% from the same period a year earlier, according to FactSet. For the calendar year, analysts on average expect 11% earnings growth.

Of course, the momentum in markets and a strong underlying economy could carry the S&P 500 higher for the rest of the year. But prudent investors should not be complacent, as risks remain:

- inflation might prove stickier-than-expected further delaying rate cuts
- the economy could slow, producing weaker-than-expected corporate earnings.

As noted previously, central banks have likely reached the end of their hiking cycles. That has shifted attention to the timing and pace of eventual rate cuts. Typically, central banks are loathe to cut rates too early, instead easing only after recessionary conditions – such as an increase in unemployment – become apparent. But this business cycle is highly unusual due to the pandemic, and so historical precedents provide limited insights. We still expect central banks to start cutting in the second half of the year, and for the RBA to wait until after the Fed has initiated cuts, as it will not want to place undue pressure on the AUD.

Outlook

On balance, we remain optimistic that inflation will continue to decline, that a soft landing for the global economy is the most probable scenario, and that 2024 is likely to see positive share market returns helped by falling rates in the latter half.

With share markets hitting new all-time highs and increasing “animal spirits” amongst investors, it is time to be selective in constructing resilient and diversified portfolios. In our view, there are still excellent investment opportunities on the ASX, particularly for companies at the quality end of the spectrum and in the small cap sector.

Portfolio Commentary

The Sterling Clime Growth portfolio returned 2.8% for the month of March, underperforming its benchmark which returned 3.2%. The key drivers of portfolio performance and major portfolio changes are outlined in the tables below.

Positive Attributors	Comment
Resmed Inc CHESSE Depository Interests on a ratio of 10 CDIs per ord.sh (RMD)	Maintaining our overweight stance on RMD, which delivered a +13% share price return in March, we anticipate further market share gains amidst peers' challenges. The share price should benefit from ongoing unraveling of the negative GLP-1 narrative, underlining our positive outlook for the stock.
Newmont Corporation Registered Shs Chess Depository Interests Repr 1 Sh (NEM)	A rally in the gold price during March to all-time-highs aided the gold mining sector, with NEM rebounding strongly reflecting its undemanding valuation. We retain conviction in NEM's portfolio optimisation strategy which over time will lead to a higher quality company with superior ability to fund attractive growth projects and deliver sector leading quarterly distributions to shareholders.
Negative Attributors	Comment
Pilbara Minerals Limited (PLS)	In contrast to the strong performance in February, lithium miners struggled in March as the price of metal remained relatively flat in the month and currently sits at cyclical lows. We continue to view PLS as the highest quality miner for pure play exposure to lithium and retain a small exposure.

Portfolio Activity

BUY	Comment
RMD-AU (RMD)	RMD delivered a strong result, yet has underperformed the broader market during February due to the risk associated with the GLP-1 weightloss medication. RMD is trading on approx 22x FY25 price-to-earnings (P/E) which is well below its longer term average of 30x P/E. We decided to add to the position, given the positive earnings momentum the business has, thanks to strong cost management strategies. We are confident margins will improve, and that sales will be well supported with no significant competition expected to return to the market for at the very least another year, as rival Phillips scrambles to get back to market and restore confidence.

SELL	Comment
ALQ-AU (ALQ)	ALQ has amended earnings guidance to the lower end of their range. The group has now made three acquisitions, one of which was the acquiring the remaining 51% of Nuvisan which was acquired on a call option for nothing, given Nuvisan did not meet their earn out. The initial 49% will also be written down. This is concerning, and we believe the integration of these acquisitions puts uncertainty over our outlook for the company. We decided to exit the ALQ position, since it has performed well to date and is now at our assessed fair value.

MQG-AU (MQG)	In its latest trading update, MQG pointed out a decrease in its year to date net profit after tax (NPAT) compared to last year, with notable declines across both its stable and market-linked sectors. Despite a downward revision in short-term forecasts, the company's long-term growth drivers, such as decarbonisation and infrastructure, remain strong. Capital surplus levels are slightly reduced but remain solid. In response to these developments and the recent uptick in share price, we have decided to realise profits while still recognising the company's ongoing value potential.

GMG-AU (GMG)	GMG has surged over 16% since the 1H24 result, when management, yet again, upgraded earnings guidance as they have a nice habit of doing at the half year release. We remain very bullish about the outlook for GMG, having repeatedly praised management for their strategic move into Data Centre Development. The business is very well capitalised, and structural drivers for industrial property remain well intact. However, following the strong share price move, we have decided to realise some profits and trim the position based on valuation grounds.
